Policy Efforts

Overview

State and Federal Efforts

Background

Federal, state, and many city governments are enacting legislation and policies to attract healthy food retail and improve the quality of available food in low-income underserved communities. These programs are improving health and revitalizing communities by creating jobs and serving as anchors to other commercial development, which increases retail activity, employment rates, and property values in the surrounding neighborhoods.

In this section you will find detailed information about these food financing policy initiatives at national, state, and local levels.

We Welcome Your Input

To help us make this a comprehensive list of policy efforts supporting healthy food retail in the country, please let us know if you have a program underway in your state or community or know of one that you think should be included here. The Campaign for Junk Food

When we began our Let's Move! initiative four years ago, we set one simple but ambitious goal: to end the epidemic of childhood obesity in a generation so that kids born today will grow up healthy. Today, we are seeing glimmers of progress. But unfortunately, we're now seeing attempts in Congress to undo so much of what we've accomplished on behalf of our children.

WEBINAR-Healthy Food Retail in Rural Communities

Rural grocery stores anchor a community by supplying fresh foods and staples; creating local jobs; attracting complementary businesses; and increasing the tax base. Today they are under siege because of competition with "big box" stores for customers; high energy costs, the inability to buy products in small quantities; elderly owners with no succession plans, and low population density. This webinar explores the unique challenges that rural grocers face and discuss innovative solutions to improving access to healthy foods in rural America.

Project Highlights

$300,000
in grant funding from the New York Healthy Food & Healthy Communities Fund (HFHC), administered by LIIF.

$500,000
in loan funding.

5,300
of Highland Falls residents have improved access to healthy food, according to measures used by HFHC.

12,000
square feet of food retail is now serving the community, including a newly renovated space for fresh produce.

20 Jobs
have been created, full- and part-time.

Profile: MyTown Marketplace

Highland Falls, New York

MyTown Marketplace, a supermarket that serves the Highland Falls community of New York State, opened in 2011 with a grant provided by the New York Healthy Food Healthy Communities (HFHC) Fund. The HFHC Fund is a healthy food financing program that supports healthy food retail projects in communities where residents struggle with limited access to healthy foods. The HFHC Fund is administered by the Low Income Investment Fund (LIIF), a national community development financial institution, and The Food Trust, a national food access organization.

In the years before the arrival of MyTown, Highland Falls' only grocery store closed its doors, leaving the community with an 11-mile commute to the closest full-service grocery store. This distance was notably challenging for the population of senior citizens in the community who had limited car access. Highland Falls is a moderate-income community of approximately 5,500 residents in the Mid-Hudson Valley region of the state, roughly 50 miles north of New York City. Close to three-quarters of the area's residents are Caucasian and the town has an expanding Hispanic population.

Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

Support for this website was provided by a grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

Front

Although Highland Falls' Mayor Joseph E. D'Onofrio temporarily alleviated the problem of limited access to healthy foods by having local government sponsor a shuttle-bus service to a neighboring supermarket, a long-term solution was needed.

Fortunately for the community, Lisa Berrios and Albert Rodriguez, a husband and wife team, stepped up to the challenge of bringing healthy foods back to Highland Falls. The couple applied to the HFHC Fund and were awarded $300,000 in grant funding and a $500,000 loan to help renovate the physical layout of a new supermarket in a vacant retail grocery space, left vacant by a departing grocery store a year earlier. After additions and a needed expansion of the store's fresh produce department, MyTown Marketplace, a now 12,000-square-foot retail space, is serving the Highland Falls community. In addition to LIIF and The Food Trust, supporters of the project included Empire State Development, Goldman Sachs Group Inc., New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets, the New York State Health Foundation, and The Reinvestment Fund.

Since HFHC's inception in 2010, the program has funded over 10 projects in rural, suburban, and urban communities across the state, and is improving access to healthy foods for thousands of New York residents, including over 5,000 individuals who call Highland Falls home. MyTown Marketplace has brought 20 full- and part-time jobs to the community while improving access to healthy food for local families and individuals. The addition of these jobs to Highland Falls has complemented MyTown's bottom line, by improving the local economy. The store is also a member of the "Pride of New York" local agriculture promotion program.

"Those who live in the area, including us, have desperately needed the reopening of our only full-service supermarket," Lisa Berrios said at the grand opening. "The reopening of MyTown Marketplace could only have been accomplished with the support of the New York Healthy Food & Healthy Communities Fund. The dollars invested in our store, our community, and the health of Highland Falls' families have made a powerful and positive difference in our lives."
